

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 18
Issue 3 Fall

Article 6

1988

Council of Agde

Mary Ruefle

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Ruefle, Mary. "Council of Agde." The Iowa Review 18.3 (1988): 55-55. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3660>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Two Poems · Mary Ruefle

COUNCIL OF AGDE

In the village of Agde, in 835, an ecclesiastical court, after much debate, ruled for the first time that women had souls.

Armed with a cotton-puff and a little sword
the bachelorette is attacking her toes:
lesbos blue, black grape, pink stupor.
The variegated half-face of a modern master
leers on the wall.
Everything she owns has its own white space
and is centered so: spare hangers in the spare closet, shoes
in their own neat row.
The phone has its own room
and is held like a gun, snug to the temple. Meals?
She'll touch nothing but noodles,
finely sauced in a cardboard box.
And babies? At the end of an alley an old woman sits with her needles knitting them out of dead skin.